

Where does all the water go?

On average, every Singapore resident uses about 151 litres of water per day, a figure some may find surprising. The Sunday Times looks at what the water is used for at home, and how we compare with other countries and cities.

Estimated water use per capita per day:

Do you know how much water you use for different activities at home? Here is the percentage breakdown of water use for each activity in a typical household:

