

How parents see primary school

The Institute of Policy Studies recently conducted a survey looking at parents' perceptions of the primary school system. Here are some key findings.

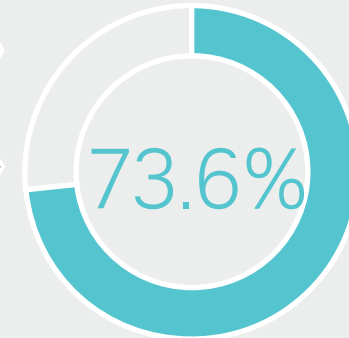

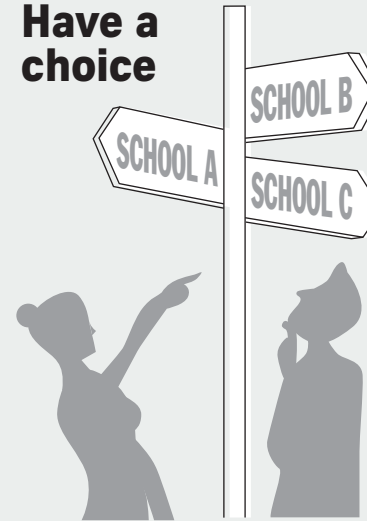

Think highly of schools

■ 90.4 per cent of parents think that most primary schools in Singapore provide a high-quality education.

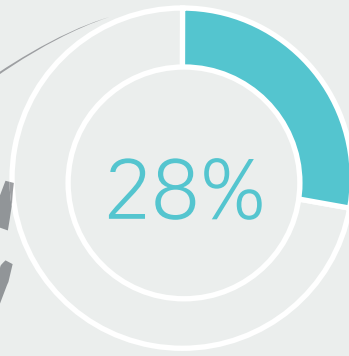

Have a choice

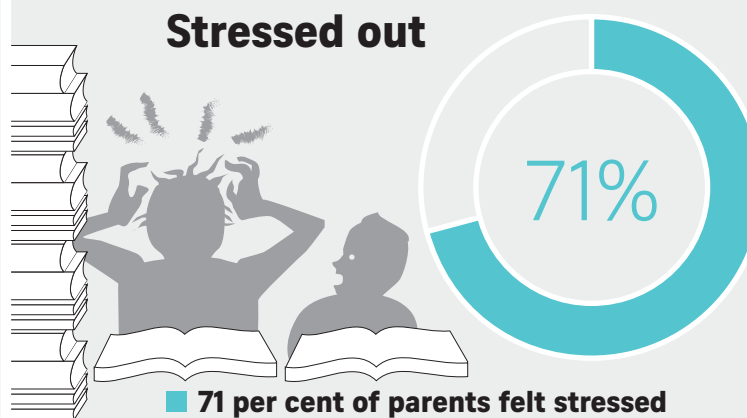

■ 73.6 per cent of parents could enrol their child in a school of their choice.

Some hurdles

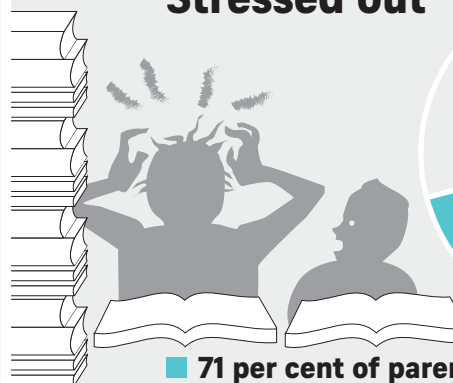

■ 28 per cent of parents said they had experienced challenges in enrolling their child in a primary school of their choice.

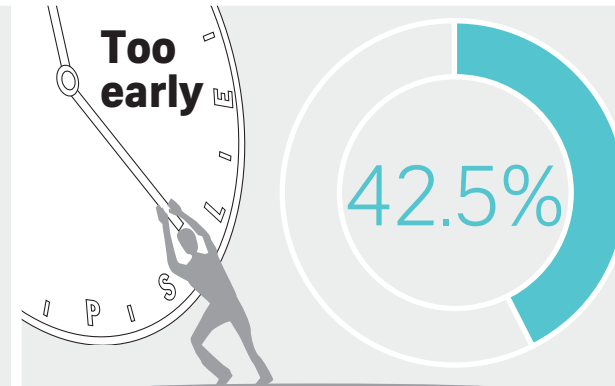

Stressed out

■ 71 per cent of parents felt stressed from helping their child with tests and examinations in school.

Too early

■ 42.5 per cent of parents said the Primary School Leaving Examination should be postponed to a later age.
